

Two OVNARI members win regional CotY awards

Total of seven national contest awards go to southwest Ohio remodelers

Two Ohio Valley NARI members were named as regional winners in the 2007 National Contractor of the Year Award competition conducted NARI.

Chapter members receiving regional CotY honors were Kessler Construction Services, in the Residential Exterior $100,000 and Over category, and Neal's Design & Remodel, in the Residential Interior Specialty category.

The regional award-winning project by Kessler Construction Services involved constructing a covered porch addition that included a screened area at the rear of a Queen Anne style home built in 1910. The addition had to fit seamlessly with the home's architectural style and take advantage of spectacular river views afforded by the property.

NARI members from seven regions around the country vie for CotY Awards on an annual basis. All regional winners are eligible for National CotY Awards, which will be announced at the NARI Evening of ExcellenceSM banquet on March 24 in Austin, Texas.

Judging for the regional awards took place at the NARI national headquarters in Des Plaines, Illinois, in early January. Judging was based on problem-solving, functionality, aesthetics, craftsmanship, and innovation, degree of difficulty of the project, and entry presentation.

Members of Miami Valley NARI won five regional CotY awards, bringing a total of seven regional CotYs to southwest Ohio.

The porch addition that won a regional CotY award in the Residential Exterior Over $100,000 category for Kessler Construction Services fit seamlessly with the architectural style of the 1910 home.

Eliminating a walk-in pantry and a brick wall created a wide open kitchen-dining room-family room area.

Ohio Department of Health publishes regulations for public places smoking ban

by Bob Dunlevey
Dunlevey Mahan & Furry

The Ohio Department of Health has published proposed smoking regulations, which more fully explain Ohio's new No-Smoking law, how it works were, and how ODH intends to enforce the law. These regulations probably will become effective in early April and enforcement will then begin. But, actually, the law became effective December 7, 2006, and is being obeyed by most.

You need to act now to familiarize yourself with these regulations so they may be implemented completely in the spring. Your work rules, policies and handbooks should also be modified. Here are some of the bigger items.

■ While a proprietor or employer must prohibit smoking not only in their facilities but also in the areas under their control, which are "immediately adjacent" to points of ingress and egress, "immediately adjacent" remains undefined and is not measured by any specific number of feet from the door—contrary to what some have been publishing and what had been anticipated.

■ Proprietors must take "reasonable steps" to ensure tobacco smoke does not enter a prohibited area under their control through ownership of the property or through rights under a lease – reasonable steps include, at least, requesting the individual to stop smoking.

■ Business vehicles remain a prohibited place for smoking unless the vehicle is only occupied by the smoking driver. If the vehicle is registered by Ohio BMV and used by one or more non-smokers or the vehicle is part of a motor pool and shared by non-smokers it is a prohibited area. Signs must be firmly affixed to each passenger door window or dashboard or other visible area. Ashtrays in vehicles do not have to be removed under the general removal of receptacles law if they are not used for disposal of smoking materials, i.e., change holder.

■ Proprietors do not have to remove ashtrays from regulated areas if they are of historic or architectural value, were affixed to the property

prior to December 7, 2006 and are not used for disposal of smoking materials. In addition, a proprietor may provide ashtrays and receptacles for the purpose of individuals disposing of smoking materials prior to entering a place of employment or public place – but they must be far enough away to foreclose smoke entering a prohibited area.

■ Residents of private homes who employ service workers who perform intermittent work such as plumbing, electrical and remodeling are not considered to be in a place of employment and the residential exception to the smoking ban remains applicable. (The plumbers must have lobbied during the comment period to the Ohio Department of Health.)

■ No-smoking signs remain very specific in their requirements and must be posted at all points of transition from an area where smoking is not regulated to one that is. While it appears you cannot affix your company's telephone number to the signs to head off a complainant from calling the ODH, it is advisable to broadly publish your private number so you may be called first and avoid a fine.

■ An elaborate complaint, citation and hearing procedure that could be likened to unemployment compensation is established. If your business is a corporation you must be represented by an attorney.

■ Fine schedules for proprietors and employers violating the prohibitions are now defined: 1st violation – warning letter; 2nd – $100; 3rd – $500; 4th – $1,000 and 5th – $2,500.

■ Fines for smokers violating the law are: 1st – warning letter; 2nd and subsequent violations – $100.

■ Additional fines can be levied for intentional misconduct and continuing violations carry per diem penalties.

You may review the proposed final regulations at www.odh.state.oh.us. Ensure compliance now by appointing someone in your organization to be your compliance officer.
